A British tourist was enjoying his visit to New Zealand when something unexpected happened. Someone stole his passport while he was travelling by tour bus to the South Island. But the robber was no ordinary thief. It was a kea. Keas are a kind of parrot. They are very clever birds who are curious about humans and often land on their cars.

This kea struck when the bus stopped and the driver opened the door to take out the luggage. The bird noticed a brightly coloured bag inside with a passport sticking out of it. When the driver wasn't looking, it grabbed the passport in its beak and flew away into the thick forest! The shocked tourist stayed longer than planned, as it took six weeks to get a new one!
